

A short example for the quarterly class for L^AT_EX 2_ε

By Tyler T. Testing*

Abstract

It is well known that examples can clarify the usage of \LaTeX classes for the user. This document serves this purpose while providing no useful content for the reader.

JEL Classification: none

Keywords: example, quarterly journal

1. Introduction

This is an example. There is absolutely nothing special about it, except that it contains no useful information for the reader. However, the user of the class can use it to get hints about writing documents using this class.

1.1 About this example

For completeness, this example also has a bibliography using the `quarterly` bibliography style. For more Information about it, the reader is referred to Ehlers (2006).

2. Some text

This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text.
This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an example text. This is an

*Department of Testing, University of Testing, tyler@testing.edu

The author of this example text would like to thank all the people involved in developing the L^AT_EX document type-setting system.

[illegible]

L^AT_EX Quarterly 1 (2005) 1

[illegible]

Ehlers, R. (2006): Quarterly.bst - A BibTeX bibliography style for quarterly journals.